Office of the President

Dear Class of 2025 Accepted Students,

On behalf of the entire extended Howard University family, congratulations on your acceptance to our University! Regardless of your personal circumstances, I'm sure the past 12 months have been difficult for you. The coronavirus pandemic has shifted the landscape of higher education, just as it has transformed the entire globe. Despite this, I hope this news of your acceptance provides you with a glimpse into what I'm sure will be a brighter future this Fall.

Howard has a sterling reputation as an institution that advocates for social justice and cultivates leaders who have the skills and the knowledge to serve as social justice crusaders. In our history, Howard has produced four Rhodes Scholars, three Marshal Scholars, 11 Truman Scholars, 25 Pickering Fellows and more than 70 Fulbright Scholars. Our esteemed alumni include Thurgood Marshall, the first African-American Supreme Court justice, and Vernon Jordan, the civil rights icon and presidential adviser.

The pandemic has revealed historic and deep-seated inequities in health care, the justice system, corporate America and society at large, and many students are passionate about illuminating the truth and resolving these issues once and for all. Howard continues to produce half of the Black doctors and dentists nationwide and remains the top producer of African-Americans achieving Ph.D.s in STEM fields.

The election of Howard alumna Kamala Harris as the first Black individual, first female and first person of Asian descent to become vice president has shone a beaming spotlight on our University. Concerned about the state of our world and inspired by the example of Vice President Harris, we saw a significant rise in applications among students interested in pursuing careers in medicine, business, government and the law. I am proud to say that Howard has accepted one of the most impressive and diverse groups of incoming scholars in the history of our institution.

Class of 2025, you are entering higher education at a critical inflection point in national and global history. Accepted Student Day (ASD) continues to be a virtual program because we have not completely shaken free of the pandemic that has gripped and changed our world for over a year. While the future is uncertain, it is very much within our power to shape.

Howard is so special because our academic approach never was, nor ever will be confined to a classroom or building. While it is my immense hope and expectation that we will meet in-person, on campus in Fall 2021, whatever platform our educational experience is delivered, it will be world-class.

When you're admitted to Howard, we invite you to join us on a journey to disrupt the status quo, and prepare you for every experience that awaits you upon your successful matriculation – now more than ever, the world needs you.

I look forward to welcoming you to the Howard University family and preparing to celebrate your future success.
